

Rick Alpaugh

Vice President of International Business Development

Rick Alpaugh is the Vice President of International Business Development for SupplyCore. His responsibilities include customer and supplier relations as well as leading teams in business development processes, international business strategy, solution design for programs, and supporting program execution worldwide. Prior to this position, Rick had a long career with the US Government and also worked in industry for several years, nearly all of that time related to international sales of both material and services. In January of 2013 Rick returned to government service as the Deputy Chief of Staff for Acquisition and Logistics, USASAC. For three years prior to his return to government, Mr. Alpaugh served as the Vice President for International Military Sales for AM General LLC. In that position, he was responsible for development and execution of global strategies for sales and support of AM General products in more than 50 countries. From August of 1998, when Mr. Alpaugh was appointed to the Senior Executive Service, until his retirement in 2010, Mr. Alpaugh served as Deputy to the Commander, USASAC. Mr. Alpaugh began his civil service career in 1974, working as a GS-3 Computer Operator at the New Cumberland Army Depot. Mr. Alpaugh's assignments include Chief, Programs Division; Project Manager, Egyptian Automation Computer Center; Director for Logistics Support; Civilian Executive for Operations and Director, Policy, Plans and Operations. Mr. Alpaugh attended Shippensburg State College, in his hometown and was an honor graduate of the Army Materiel Command Supply Intern program. His awards include both the Army Superior and Meritorious Civilian Service Awards and the Presidential Meritorious Executive Award. He has twice been nominated as Federal Executive of the Year for Central Pennsylvania. Jeff Fahrenwald, Vice President of Strategy Development and Execution.